At least not when it comes to casual voter behaviour: even in this month's online poll for The Drum's Facebook page, the ones who didn't vote put forward lower scores than regular voters did. At the time of writing, a small fraction of voters have taken part in the informal poll. Anecdotally, the reaction has been muted. "I'm off work and on my way to Melbourne. I don't really want to vote but I might just to be different," one person wrote. Another wrote: "Paid to play. Nothing to do with politics." (This is an early round poll, so there's no mechanism for voting multiple times, and since it's Facebook, people can 3da54e8ca3
