Google Chrome profile settings. The user interface is easy to navigate through, by both novices and experts. the app notifies you if a newer version of Google Chrome is available, every time you initiate it. Installation: Click the downloaded file using Windows Explorer to install the program. A shortcut will be created in the Start menu or on the desktop. Interface: The application is arranged in a similar format to all Microsoft Windows interface. You can view and access a list of profiles, initiate a wizard to backup and restore a profile, create a new profile or add an existing one, access Preferences, run the initialization process, and access the Favorites, Settings and Help section. You can browse through the backed up profile to restore any features to it, such as add-ons, extensions and tools. The wizard, in the backup mode, lets you either select the default profile or a specific one to create a copy for, and set the output destination. The restoring process is similar. In the Preferences menu, you can set the software to enable password protection for backups and to show paths for Google Chrome and Chromium, as well as set the compression rate. Moreover, you can run the Google Chrome Backup initialization process to reset to default settings, clear private data settings (remove cookies, Internet cache and history, initialize Google Chrome) and select preferred language. When you create a new profile, you can add a shortcut to it, as well as switches to that shortcut - proxy connection, disable popup blocking, disable DNS prefetch, disable Java and images, and more. A backup or restore task takes little time to finish (according to the complexity of your profile settings), while the program uses a moderate amount of system resources. We haven't encountered any problems during our tests, except for the fact that we couldn't backup a profile via the context menu in the list of profiles. All in all, Google Chrome Backup is a very practical tool when it comes to backing up and restoring the profile settings of a web browser (Google Chrome, in this case), and we recommend you try it. Google Chrome
