Note Creating files from a computer always creates raster files that require a graphics program such as Photoshop or Illustrator to alter their appearance. Other editing programs, such as Microsoft PowerPoint or Microsoft Word, offer features and options that let users edit documents without having to rely on a graphics application. It is essential to be familiar with the basics of raster and vector editing before jumping into a graphics or design program. * * * # Anatomy of an Image To understand how an image is constructed and manipulated, it's essential to understand how raster images are created and how they are managed. A raster image is a raster-based file that has been created for printing or online publication. Generally, they are created with raster applications such as Photoshop or Paint Shop Pro. A raster image has the following characteristics: * **Raster-based** : Raster-based images are comprised of pixels and an image is its pixels. Each pixel can be in any color or shade of color. * **2D** : No matter how much you zoom in or zoom out, a raster image remains a 2D image, meaning that the image exists as a flat plane that cannot be hidden behind other layers. * **Vector-based** : Vector-based images have points, lines, or curves that form the shape of the image. A vector-based image, however, doesn't exist as pixels but rather as coordinates that form the lines, points, and curves of the image. * **2D+** : A 2D+ image can be a combination of elements that include vector images, effects, and text. Such elements are layers. They can exist in different places in the image and are always at the same level in the image. ## Pixel Breakdown Photoshop is a raster-based image-editing program. This means that each pixel in the raster image is where the image actually exists in the finished product. Let's take a look at the anatomy of a pixel in a r

Analysis of ruminal fermentation in dairy cows. Batch fermentations were conducted on duplicate samples of ruminal digesta from 28 cows fed in random order, either a total mixed ration (TMR) or a chopped forage diet (low roughage diet). The fermentation end products analyzed were volatile fatty acids (VFA). Gas production and methanogenesis were also analyzed. The TMR diet consisted mainly of corn silage, soybean meal, and alfalfa hay. The low roughage diet consisted of corn and protein supplements and contained only hay as roughage. The fermentations for the first experiment consisted of mixtures of ruminal digesta from two cows fed the TMR diet and from two cows fed the low roughage diet. The second experiment consisted of samples from a single cow fed the TMR diet. The third experiment was the adaptation of the protocol of the first two experiments to a commercial prototype incubator. Gas production rate was used to monitor fermentation in the fermentations. The slow increasing gas production rates which occurred after the substrate was added to the fermentations contained approximately 76% acetate, 19% propionate, and 5% butyrate. Gas production rapidly increased for 2 hr; the acetate proportion of the gas phase equilibrated and then slowly increased. The initial increase in gas production was due to a rapid increase in methane production. The gas phase then contained approximately 64% acetate, 29% propionate, and 7% butyrate, with a final acetate proportion of approximately 50%. Methanogenesis was 0.19 g CH<sub>4</sub>/g DM acetate produced. The fermentations from the two cows fed the TMR diet were similar to each other. (ABSTRACT TRUNCATED AT 250 WORDS)

Rib fractures in adults: etiology and consequences. Rib fractures are a frequent emergency presentation. The acute symptoms are generally mild, and there are many related to the nonspecific evaluation. Most patients with rib fractures do not receive a chest radiograph, but the major consequence is that 2.8 million Americans receive an additional 4.1 million unnecessary radiological studies. The purpose of this article is to provide an update on rib fractures. I have covered the following areas: prevalence in various patient groups, etiology, risk factors, soft tissue complications, and treatment.

Q: Make last record in query I got the following code: `SELECT * FROM table1 LEFT OUTER JOIN table2 ON table1.table1_id = table2.table2_id WHERE table2.table2_id IS NULL ORDER BY table2.table2_id DESC LIMIT 0, 2` What this returns is a list of records from table1 and, for each record, a corresponding record from table2. However, what I need is a list of records, for each of them, from the last record (that is the second last record) of table2 - if there are less than 2, just the second last record and the previous. So, records should be ordered by table2.table2_id, then table2.table2_id from the last to the second last record and then from the second last to the first one (see the image).. Is it possible to have the last record for each table? A: `SELECT t1.* FROM table1 t1 JOIN (SELECT t2.table2_id, MAX(t2.table2_id) AS max_id FROM table2 t2 GROUP BY t2.table2_id) t2 ON t1.table1_id = t2.table2_id WHERE t2.max_id = 2;`

A man was arrested at a home in North Seattle last week. It was outside the address where a 22-year-old woman was found dead just over two months ago. But the arrest — for suspected rape — occurred inside an apartment building. That new information comes from the Ballard resident who called 911 after seeing a man with a knife
