Today, we'll be talking about how to integrate a Google Sheet to your Photoshop files. In other words, we'll be creating and editing a Google Sheet (not necessarily uploaded to Google Sheets) within Photoshop. Watch this video to learn how to upload a Photoshop image file and replace a Google Sheet with that file. How to Upload a Photoshop File to a Google Sheet Firstly, you'll need a Photoshop file that you want to move to Google Sheet. You can do that by using a tool called Pixlr. This is a good site for beginners and it's very well organized. Once the image is loaded, there will be an "Upload Here" menu at the top of the page. Click that and select your file. Click "Continue". Image Size For this tutorial, we're only using a small size image. More images are better to begin with. You can select between the following sizes for the format: Archive: a maximum of 1MB of original quality or 1GB for compressed quality Histogram: any size between 24x19 pixels and 1MB. Let's Start As soon as the image is uploaded, you will find a box at the top-left of the Pixlr editor. Clicking on that box opens the "Document Inspector". This will bring up a window that shows all the layers of the Photoshop file you've uploaded. There are options for editing the file structure, selecting layers and adding effects. For the purpose of this tutorial, we only want to merge the original Photoshop file to a Google Sheet. Click "Merge Layers" or "Merge" on the first page of options. If you've imported multiple images, this will combine the images into one so that you can select all the layers for merging. Once you've done that, you can navigate to the second page of options. We'll click on the arrow that says "Crop Layers". This will bring up an option box that will let you trim the image to the exact dimensions needed. You can also change the position for each layer. Finally, click "Apply". Image Credit: Pixlr Editor Google Sheets Google Sheet offers multiple options for formatting and styling, and you can
