WASHINGTON (Reuters) - The U.S. Republican Party is slightly more likely than Democrats to say it wants to prevent illegal immigrants from entering the United States, according to a Reuters/Ipsos opinion poll released on Tuesday. FILE PHOTO - A U.S. flag waves in the breeze at sunset at a baseball field in San Francisco, California October 7, 2008. REUTERS/Robert Galbraith The poll showed only a slight shift from previous releases that found Republicans preferred deporting illegal immigrants, while Democrats were more likely to favor allowing them to stay. But it showed that more people, including both Republicans and Democrats, supported tightening border security. More than 9 in 10 Americans think illegal immigrants should be deported, according to the poll. The poll of 1,929 adults was conducted between April 4 and April 11 and has a credibility interval, a measure of accuracy, of about 3 percentage points. The poll has a credibility interval of about 4 percentage points for Republicans and Democrats. The poll, which was released on the eve of the annual policy convention of the Republican National Committee, showed 61 percent of Republicans want to deport all illegal immigrants who are in the United States, compared with 43 percent of Democrats. Among Americans overall, about 8 in 10 want illegal immigrants deported, including a higher percentage of both Republicans and Democrats than in previous polls. That includes 44 percent 3da54e8ca3
