Magicq obama Cafe d'Agothemediterranee The Internet search platform is at the center of a dispute between Google and the United States government. .Q: Xcode 10 search all files in the project In previous Xcode versions, if I make a change to a source file in my project, I can use the "Search all for" feature and see where the change is reflected within the project. How do I do this in Xcode 10? I tried the default Control-F but the search field was empty. I tried to look for "Search all files" but I can't find it anywhere (on a few old Xcode versions I can see it in the upper-right corner of the window, but Xcode 10 has no such option). I want to be able to search for a keyword within the entire project. A: The "Search all Files" option lives in the Find menu in the top menu bar. Q: How to escape a pipe-separated string in Python I am trying to create a string that is normally pre-parsed into an array using a pipe ("|") as a delimiter. I would like to be able to take that delimited string and split it into a list such that I can verify that the order of the items in the string are what I expect. So, let's assume we have a string like this: string = 'foo1|foo2|foo3|bar1|bar2' I want to be able to split it into a list in the following format (i.e., the number of separators in the string must be identical to the number of items in the list, plus one): ['foo1', 'foo2', 'foo3', 'bar1', 'bar2'] I was going to try to use ast.literal_eval() to parse the string into a list, but this doesn't work if there is a | in the string. I could use .split() then use a regex on each of the resulting strings (e.g., '\\d'), but I am hoping there is a better/easier way to achieve this? A: Assuming you really have this string
