Adobe Photoshop CC 2018 v19.1.3.46176 (x64) MI Free + Keygen.Q: Changing the default value for a column in rails migration I was wondering if it was possible to change the default value for a column in a migration? In my migration I have a column which is the number of users in a group which has a default value of 1 for the first group then it counts up to the size of the user_groups table. change_column :user_groups, :size, :integer, :default => 1, :limit => 16 I want to change the default value of this so that it is set to say 2 for the second group and then keep counting up... Something like: change_column :user_groups, :size, :integer, :default => 2, :limit => 16 I don't know if this is possible or not so any help would be much appreciated. Thanks A: You cannot change what value is stored in the database, that's not how the database works. What you can do is ignore it for the first insert and only set it later if the row is modified: def change change_column :user_groups, :size, :integer UserGroup.where(id => 1).first_or_create(size: 2) end This will return the first user_group with a size of 2 and you'll have to remove that method before adding a new one. You may want to look into using a transaction for the update so this won't run more than once (and return an error if there is a conflict). The Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister said he is being targeted because he has allegedly criticised the present leadership and asked why the Centre is not focussed on development. Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath. Lucknow: The Uttar Pradesh government on Saturday came down heavily on the central government over its failure to tackle the prevailing "law and order" situation and demanded a CBI probe into the string of bomb blasts across the country in the last few months and "dialogue" with various terrorist groups in Jammu and Kashmir and also Punjab.
