SOLOMON RIVER: Bleeding scar which tells a story Published:10:19Thursday 03 December 2015 Share this article Book work has turned into a bit of a passion for William Ervine and they are once again learning the art of book writing. The showman's daughter Kirsty O'Hearn is currently working on a story about a life long battle with illness. William and Kirsty, now full-time residents of Bedone, have a number of children together – William and Kirsty are also parents to Ruthie, Jamie, Finn, Amber and Madeline – and Kirsty is also mother to twins Rowan and Galen. But it was when they had twins that William first decided to write a book. The book, titled Bleeding Scar, tells of an incident when William, when he was around nine years old, did not appreciate the kindness of a stranger, who did not know he was sick. The picture illustrates the courage of a woman who refused to give up on helping William and his mother. Kirsty, who has been working on the book for around a year, said: "I did a bit of research into book writing and I just thought 'I'll give it a try'". "The story I was wanting to write about was the fact that William had long had a bleeding scar on the back of his head that was a mark of a stroke. "His mum thought that he had it because he had fallen and hit his head. What if it was something else? "I had conversations with other people and it was fascinating to hear their memories about their own things. "After I'd done a lot of reading, I had the idea of making a book out of it." The book has grown from a hard cover booklet with a cover illustration to an 80 page soft cover book. It includes a foreword and afterword by William and a short biography of Kirsty as well as a short history of the Middleton family. The book also details William's journey and how he has now recovered from the stroke. Kirsty said: "I haven't had many people write to me and tell me what they think but for some reason, people just want to read about themselves. "I

Molecular assembly of the hepatic plasma membrane. The plasma membrane of liver cells contains a large number of membrane proteins, including bile canalicular membrane domains which are essential for bile formation. Most of the bile canalicular membrane proteins are GPI-anchored and carry carbohydrate determinants. The coat is linked to the membrane via proteinaceous links (L1 and L2). A cis-element in the second extracellular loop of the bile salt export pump is sufficient to confer bile canalicular targeting of this protein. Even though the coat and the plasma membrane domains are assembled by different molecular mechanisms, they are both attached to the membrane via a common factor, the previously identified membrane domain molecule. Related Articles Related Events PepsiCo Inc. has hired Genpact as an independent party to perform due diligence with regard to the acquisition of STMicroelectronics by Marvell Technology Group Ltd. PepsiCo is STMicro's largest customer. Genpact will survey and evaluate top management teams, financial and operating plans, product portfolios, and marketing plans, among other aspects. After the acquisition, PepsiCo's data storage business will be part of Marvell, and the company will look to sell off its other storage businesses. "We're pleased that PepsiCo is picking Genpact as an independent evaluator of the STM acquisition," said Richard Stickel, Genpact's CEO. "This decision reflects PepsiCo's commitment to a rigorous review process and the value of Genpact's independent analysis. We look forward to working with STM's management team to help ensure a smooth integration and to ensure the success of STM in its new market environment." STMicroelectronics plans to complete the acquisition by the second quarter of 2018. PepsiCo has purchased 12 million shares of Marvell stock and has the right to acquire 50 million more shares. The company also has the right to buy back up to half of Marvell's outstanding common stock. STM has an enterprise addressable market of around $92 million, with enterprise revenue expected to reach $6.5 billion this year, according to a press statement. STM's products are used in a wide range of applications, including smartphones, tablets, PCs, digital cameras, automotive, enterprise networks, storage, graphics, and industrial controls. STM and Marvell have a strong relationship with their combined customers
