The Pen Tool is a freeform drawing tool that lets you make lines, rectangles, and other shapes. The Gradient Tool lets you create complex color gradients from 2D to 3D. The Rectangular Selection tool lets you select an area of an image by dragging a rectangular box around it. Layers are like sheets of paper on your hard drive that you put over your image. You can move and edit them to create special effects or add other pieces of media to a single image. The Patterns panel is the place to store patterns that you use with the Pattern Stamp tool or the Pattern Fill tool. The Tools panel is the place to find and launch all of the Photoshop tools. If the camera has a lens on the back, you can install the lens of the camera, so the image is focused as it should be. To open the menu of Photoshop, press the "CTRL+ALT+Z." You can place the lens of the camera. And then after that, we would click on "Select Lens" and it will open. Then, you can focus the camera. You can see at the lens that the camera is focused. The Lens is set to my zoom, focus and other settings. Here, we can set the following: Focus mode Aperture size and shutter speed. And if you look here at "Strip time," it will be set to "0." This option is used to reduce the shutter speed and increase the shutter count. For example, if you shoot a person sitting in a car with a wide aperture, then you can reduce the shutter speed and increase the shutter count, which will simulate that the person is moving. Then, you can close it and save the settings. If you have a camera with an auto ISO control, you can decrease or increase this option. And we have the following settings here: Resolution "Sony" is set at the "Fine" option, so that we can take photos that are more detailed. Whether we are in manual mode or in Automatic mode, we can adjust the white balance. In Automatic mode, we have the "Auto White Balance" option in the "On" position, and in Manual mode, we can manually change the white balance by using the WB button. "
