Story highlights James Deen sparked a firestorm this week when he was caught in an elevator with a porn star His ex-partner says, "I'd like to continue being James' porn star and be there for him" (CNN) James Deen is speaking out publicly for the first time since being caught in an elevator with porn actress Stormy Daniels during the height of the #MeToo movement. Deen, who was fired from his job at adult company Vivid Entertainment after his elevator encounter came to light, told CBS's "This Morning" on Thursday that he understands his former partner's position and doesn't take issue with it. "I would like to continue being James' porn star and be there for him and keep supporting him," Deen said. "It's just her doing her job. I don't take anything away from her job. And I'm just doing what I do. I'm not going to be the bad guy in this. I'm not going to try to sit there and say I did nothing wrong. "I know I did nothing wrong. I was just giving somebody advice about their sex life, and not going to be the villain in this. I'm not going to sit
