computer. It's a tool that you can use to clean up shortcuts on your computer that are not executable. When you install a shortcut on the computer's desktop, that shortcut gains the properties of other items in the desktop. The shortcut becomes an icon that can be opened and modified. You can use the shortcut to launch any program you have installed on your computer. Therefore, if you do not want anyone to use the shortcut, you can either disable it or delete the shortcut itself. When a shortcut is not executable, that is, when a shortcut is not in the current directory, you can delete the shortcut using Unlocker Tool. A shortcut that is not executable is usually created by a "shortcut wrapper", which is a program that generates a shortcut after installing a program on your computer. A shortcut wrapper has an icon, or shortcut, that is just like other shortcuts on the desktop. It is created so that its icon can be used as a shortcut. For example, if you use Windows Explorer, the shortcut wrapper for Explorer is created and placed on your desktop. After creating the shortcut, the shortcut wrapper opens the Explorer.exe program, which is installed on your computer, and creates a shortcut on the desktop that can be used to open the program. After the process of creating the shortcut is completed, the shortcut is shown on the desktop with a shortcut icon, just like any other shortcut.
