Category:Autodesk softwareQ: What would be most efficient way to get relation in app engine datastore, for groups? I have been trying to get the most efficient way of getting a list of groups for a user based off the groups the user belongs to. What I have been doing is: class User(db.Model): name = db.StringProperty() groups = db.ListProperty(db.Key) class Group(db.Model): user = db.ReferenceProperty(User) name = db.StringProperty() A group is a user which should be able to add themselves to a group. I then try and get all the groups like this: first_groups = Group.query(Group.user == user).order('-creationtime').fetch(200) This works fine, but there is a lot of groups and its returned as soon as possible. Basically the groups will either have 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 users (depending on the rules) that can also add to the group. The actual number of users and groups is not an issue, if its more than 0 or 1, but 2 or more needs to be sorted by creationtime so the newest join group is at the top. Basically what I want to find is: for i in user.groups: print(i.name) which I have tried to do without success. Is there a recommended way of doing this or is a query the best way to go about it? A: The most efficient way to get a list of groups for a user is to retrieve the reference to the user and then fetch the relevant groups. user = users.get_current_user() for group in Group.query(Group.user == user).fetch(200): print(group.name) The other way to get a list of groups for a user is to retrieve the entire list of groups for that user and sort it by creation time: groups = Group.query(Group.user == user).order('-creationtime') for group in groups.fetch(200): print(group.name) In this example, fetch(200) will retrieve as many groups from the database as it
