At the heart of HyperMotion Technology is the same engine used in FIFA 21 to create a heightened level of real-life accuracy in players’ physical movement. Each of the 22 unique player models in FIFA 22 has its own “cohesion and weight” qualities that is used to create detailed animations that enable the player to create a more life-like movement. Every dynamic played out in an EA SPORTS FIFA player has been re-enacted in the FIFA 22 engine. Try tackling the ball with a fully responsive shoulder while striding in a low or high speed toward the goal, run to avoid a rival like a hot sauce chicken, or battle for possession in a real world action. “We really had a tremendous amount of data from real-life players and our data scientists worked like crazy to create a unique set of animation rules for the game to create as lifelike a player as possible,” said Matt Turek, Senior Producer, EA SPORTS FIFA 22. “We wanted to create a game where all of the player’s movements have perfect interactions with the real-life player’s animations.” AFL Players EA SPORTS approached the AFL to help identify 22 of the greatest AFL players in history. From these high profile players, the AFL engineers created a detailed character model that mimics the movements of real life. The player can make any type of move, including the precise touch and ball control. The champion in this year’s FIFA 22 cover is Sydney Swans superstar Lance “Buddy” Franklin. “It was a lot of work getting the right character to capture the essence of Buddy, but it was worth it,” said Turek. “The question the team had to answer was ‘How did Buddy Franklin move?’ How did the AFL player move? How did the real-life player move? So we made a point to mimic the accuracy of their movement.” As football fans and players, we’ve seen the evolution of player animations in video games over the last decade, and EA is looking to completely reimagine the visuals of the game with a brand new engine for FIFA 22. Gameplay Engine The gameplay engine for FIFA 22 is running on an updated version of FIFA 21 gameplay engine that integrates some new gameplay features and better physics and animations. Some of the key improvements in

Features Key:

- NEW: “HyperMotion Technology”: Move in real-world player animation and react naturally to all in-game behaviours.
- Real players’ actual skills matter, no embellishment, with a new ball physics engine, improved player animations, smarter AI and new physics-based systems.
- FUT CHAMPIONS – Tier 1 and 2 squads. Core 40+ players will act and look like their real world peers.
- GOALIE LOCKS – Steal a goal within dribbling distance and a goalkeeper lock works to freeze the goalkeeper and allow you to work the ball past him.
- Master your defenders – new challenge specific AI and tactics mode let you form teams around your preferred play styles, more skills, and more control over all players on the pitch
- Loading scrum – ready to step in and score – now you can break through the defence with an aerial strike in one-on-one situations, when there is space, or when the keeper dives at a high cross.
- TEAM INTELLIGENCE – All hands on deck – when there is a chance to unleash a man from behind the ball or when your maverick moves a team out of position or ahead of the game, get your full-backs into the attack, and activate tactic cards for it.
- Tactics Editor – use the in-game map to plan your next move – make sure to let your strikers know that a high cross may be coming your way and mark where to start a counterattack.

System Requirements:

In the beginning there were two gods, male and female. The male god was jealous and created the earth, air and sea. The female god created the animals. She created the sea with salt and moisture, plants with the sun and the earth with mountains. The male god created the land and the plants grew abundantly. In the mountains and in the valleys he created all kinds of animals. He also created man and woman and gave them the mission to have children and to obey their parents. In time, the female god became tired of the
