Q: Any idea how to determine AWS Serverless Framework version? I'm trying to determine the version of AWS Serverless Framework using node.js. So far, the only way I've found to find out is to visit the GIT repo for the docs and manually check out the version. Does anyone know a way to retrieve the version via the CLI? I would like to use this to determine if I'm doing things in the correct order:

A: Found it. EDIT to include examples. There are various ways to find the serverless version on the CLI:

- # Using the 'version' command: $ serverless version
- # Using the 'version' command with the aws:arg param: $

---

serverless --version # Using the '--version' command on the CLI: $ serverless --version # Using the '--help' flag: $ serverless --help # Using the '--help' flag on the CLI with the 'aws:' param: $ serverless --help --aws //

How to use what is required for www.youtube.com/watch?v=yQH8L7n4UHQ Google is free and often wonderful, but that doesn't mean you have to use their public API. Millions of other developers use private APIs for a much wider range of functions.
You don't have to use the YouTube API, for example. You don't have to use their service, or even their site. You could create your own program to pull or scrap data from a hundred different sources or write a web crawler to do it yourself. You have to be able to do it. You can even use a service in-between, like Dump.io which enables to save a list of links in a file for later or send the results to the API. Google Docs is a great free online solution for collaborative document creation with sharing. You can share it with your friends. And you can keep the document private or only share it with few selected people. Google Drive is also a good solution. It gives you lots of free space and powerful admin controls. If you're a Google Apps user, you can share any documents from Google Docs with anyone on your domain. You can share it with others, you can edit it privately, and you can also access it from anywhere. Google Sites is more of a website builder than a spreadsheet. It is great for working offline, it also has good editing and upload capabilities. Google Forms is a fast and easy way to add surveys, forms, questionnaires, data collection forms, quizzes and web forms. Google Sheets allows you to easily create and manage formulary sheets with tabs, columns and formula support. Google Slides has a good feature for design. You can choose various themes including a "clear view" which show the column names and the title of the slide, a "grid view" with additional support for aligning columns, and "smart view" which allows the columns to change according to the size of the columns or the width of the space. You can also choose a common type for the columns as well. Google Slides can be used to create presentation, information, and interactive documents in slides for a variety of audiences. Google Maps is a web mapping service. You can use it to create custom maps of your business or even create customizable maps for your site, product, or ad campaigns. Google Analytics enables you to view, analyze, and interpret data about how
