We have recently reported that gonadotropin releasing hormone (GnRH) can act on inflammatory mediator production in stimulated microglia. We therefore examined the effects of GnRH on cytokine production in cultures of mixed glial cells obtained from embryonic day 15 rat cerebral hemispheres. We found that intrahypothalamic injection of the GnRH antagonist down-regulated interleukin (IL)-1beta and tumor necrosis factor (TNF)-alpha production in an immune complex-induced model of neuroinflammation. In contrast, subcutaneous (s.c.) or intraperitoneal (i.p.) administration of GnRH induced higher levels of these proinflammatory cytokines. GnRH induced marked elevations in production of IL-10, a cytokine that has anti-inflammatory properties and is expressed in neurons. In addition, GnRH increased production of heme oxygenase 1, a cytoprotective enzyme. These data indicate that the route and timing of GnRH administration may have profound effects on cytokine production. The data further suggest that administration of GnRH in the periphery, perhaps targeting paraventricular nuclei of the hypothalamus, might serve to potentiate inflammatory states in the central nervous system.Clinically significant complications after placement of porous coated acetabular components. The use of porous coated acetabular components in revision total hip arthroplasty has increased, largely for good reason. However, there have been few reports regarding the rate and causes of failure. Our goal was to present a series of problems and complications that may occur after the use of porous coated acetabular components and our methods for addressing such problems. Our study is a retrospective review of 121 cases (141 hips 0cc13bf012 Activation File Delphi 2010 Slip Full: gistfile1.txt. Full Screen. Copy Code. Embed. This question originally appeared on Meta Stack Overflow as "Activation file for Delphi 6". A: I took a look at your code. The line is an invalid XML markup. It is for a custom XML dialog but it cannot be generated by the XML editor. Use instead. Q: Using jQuery, how to go to first input[type=text] on page load? I have a page that has about 10 other input[type=text] and two submit buttons (one to add details, and one to send the details back to the server). I would like to hide all the input[type=text] fields when the page loads. Here is what I have come up with, but unfortunately it isn't working... $(function(){ $('#this_input').parent().hide(); }); Is there a jquery command that will just focus on the first input[type=text] on the page? A: Should it be as easy as setting autofocus on the first one? Q: Matrix manipulation: $C(A
