Baptist.Monday, June 3, 2009 We have a lot of work to do!
Now it's a matter of getting back to it. I'm really looking forward to it. I'm dreading it at the same time. The plans, the preparations, the want to do it all... It's very hard to get motivated to do anything when you've been out for 5 months. I feel like my life is over and nothing really happens to me. I've got to force myself to get back on my feet.

So, I have a new baby. Edward is seven weeks old. I love him more than anything in the world. He makes me laugh everyday, he's very relaxed and sleepy. He is so cute and has the best big brown eyes ever. I want to know everything about him because he's so funny. He has the strangest way of moving things he's so active. So far he hasn't slept that often though. He's so small now, I keep telling Tom about that he'll be the biggest one by the time he's a year old. But he's really not that interested in being a big boy. He wants to be a little big boy though. Last night he was sitting on the floor just playing with the blocks I got him for his 7th birthday. I see that as being a bit big of a boy because they sit on the floor and play with blocks. Now I know you all want to know the sex of the baby. Tom & I both knew. We both wanted it to be a surprise until the last second but we forgot
