Xfrog 5 For Maya Download CrackQ: Is there any best way to check if a specific stored procedure is called in a multithread environment? My question is, when a stored procedure is called with out parameters, is there any best way to check if this specific stored procedure is called in a multithread environment, as these out parameters may be returned from other threads as well? Here's a scenario: If we have a scenario where a stored procedure is called from a client with two extra out parameters. So we get this stored procedure call exec procedure_name @param1, @param2, @param3 Is there any best way we can check if the specified procedure is called under this scenario? A: What you are trying to do would be possible with the INFORMATION_SCHEMA.ROUTINES table. The first time a procedure is executed, create a non-deterministic unique ID. Keep a look-up table of these IDs. The second time that procedure is executed, check if the IDs match. If not, you know it was run by a second client. You need to further determine if the two client threads were able to synchronize on the id column. This is tricky as the id will not have any meaning if this procedure is run more than once or multi-threaded. Q: Why does a regular expression fail with "String ends with unterminated group" when it works fine when used in the debugger? I am trying to write a regular expression that extracts a bit of data from a string. The string data looks like: 00010x222020 6d1f23a050
